Poetry.

My Neighbor's Garden.

BY ELIZABETH AKERS.

Up to the border of my small domain
My neighbor's garden stretches wide and sweet;
His roses toss against my window pane;
His jasamine wreathes my porch and doorway seat.

My threshold every May is carpeted
With pale pink petals from his peach-tree blown;
His tallest lilac lifts its plumy head
Up to the casement where I sit alone.

Waking, I hear, as dawns the morning light,
My neighbor busy in his bordered walks,
Nothing the added beauties born of night,
Culling the weeds among his flower stalks.

From early March when the brave crocus comes,
Edging the bed with lines of blue and gold,
Till the consoling, kind chrysanthemums
Contend against December's cruel cold.

My neighbor toils with wise and patient hand,
Scarce pausing in his work for sun or shower,
Evolving gradually from mold and sand
The jerm, the leaf, the perfect bud and flower.

A rare magician he whose touch transmutes—
Helped by the sprites which rule the airs and dews—
Dry dormant seeds and dark unlovely roots
To graceful shapes and richest scents and hues.

His garden teems with glad and brilliant lives:
There wheel and drive the gauzy dragoon flies
Bees gather tribute for their distant hives;
And gray moths flutter as the daylight-dies.

Sparrows and wrens sing songs that need no words;
And over flower-cups scarce more bright than they,
Green-winged and scarlet-throated humming-birds
Hang, tranced with sweet, then whirl and part away.

From branch to branch, beneath my watching eyes,
His net a black and golden spider weaves;
And scores of many-colored butterflies
Waltz in and out among the dancing leaves.

My neighbor in their midst—thrice favored one!—
Delves, plants, trains, weeds, and waters patiently,
Studies the alchemy of rain and sun,
And works his floral miracles for me.

For me! not one enjoys that Paradise
As I, within my overlooking room;
It is not seen even by the owner's eyes
At once—the whole wide stretch of growth and bloom.

With sight and mind absorbed he little thinks
How all his garden's sweetness drifts to me—
How his rich lilies and his spicy pinks
Send incense up to me continually.

Yet still he labors faithfully and long
My loneliness to brighten and beguile,
Asking for all this fragrance, bloom and song
Not even the small repayment of a smile.

Unconscious friend, who thus enriches me,
Long may thy darlings thrive, untouched by blight!
Unplagued by worm or frost! and may there be
No serpent in their Eden of delight!

And yet whose spirits faint with weariness,
Count not your work unvalued and unknown:
Cheered by your toil, some silent soul may bless
The hand which strives not for itself alone.

Selected Story.

An Opium Death.

A writer in the New York Observer under the above caption gives the following sad story of an opium-eating friend. The habit of opium eating is said by physicians to be gaining ground rapidly in this country among nearly all classes; and its effects upon mind and body becoming more and more generally disastrous. If any reader of this happens to be among those who are tampering with the drug, we trust the narrative given below will act as an effectual warning:

I have a sad, strange story to tell. Did I say "strange" Alas, I fear it will be but a recital of things familiar to some of my readers; and it is in part of those few, hoping that it may warn and help, that I tell it. But rather I write to warn any who may be in danger of the bondage, concerning which is this true and mournful history, than from hope of benefitting those already enslaved.

I have many times felt almost persuaded to write of what has been hid away in my memory for years; but as often have I shrunk from bringing forth to the public gaze the sorrows, the weakness, the struggles of one very dear to me, although facts, places and persons might be shrouded, as they may be, by fictitious names.

Of late so many facts and statistics have come to my notice of the alarming prevalence of the evil of which I write, among—I will not say especially—but even among the more educated and refined in both city and country life, that I am constrained to break the long silence I have kept.

Says one writer: "Opium is a corrosion and paralysis of all the noblest forms of life. The man who voluntarily addicts himself to its use, would commit, in cutting his throat, a suicide only swifter and less ignable. The habit is gaining ground among our professional men, the operatives in our mills, our weary sewing women, our disappointed wives, our former liquor drinkers, our every day laborers' all our classes, from highest to lowest, are yearly increasing the consumption of the drug. The terrible demands made on modern brains, especially in this country, by our feverish competitive life, life, constitute hourly use to its use as a sedative."

When lately I read the testimony of an eminent physician—"I have known of more deaths from the use of opium in some of its forms, than from all forms of alcoholic drinks"—I felt that I might no longer stay from holding up what might prove as a beacon light to some whose feet were turning aside from that Temperance which is one of the fruits of the Spirit of God, bringing them back to the way of sober self denial. For this I write, for this I earnestly pray If it be given me to know in Heaven that one soul has been kept, through God's blessing on my weak words, I shall forever praise Him that He permitted me, helped me, to tell the story, even though now it wrings my heart to write it.

My first rememberances of Ellen Gordon picture her as a young, lovely woman, refined, educated, and gifted with no ordinary tallent, possessing a rare dignity combined with a sweet graciousness of manner, that made her not only admired, but beloved by all who knew her. In a beautiful home, surrounded by loving children, and tenderly guarded and cared for by a devoted husband, she had all that earth could bestow of happiness.

Nor did she rest in these things. Her loving, child like spirit saw God in all; and I well remember how I felt much as I were talking to an angel when she talked of the works of the loving Father, when she recounted to me her impression of Niagra, or traced His love in the forming of a daisy, so clear was her vision of her power and love. I was much younger than she, yet she honored me with her love and friendship, and spoke to me without reserve—the more freely, she often said, because I was too young to criticise her enthusiasms.

For some years we rarely met. Trials in her family, my own marriage, and our separate places of abode, rendered personal intercourse well nigh impossible, and letter writing, with our respective family cares, was a difficult matter, and became very infrequent. Yet the old love never died out.

One evening, in the summer of 184–, my husband said to me at the tea table, "James Matthews called at my office today."

"Did he say anything of his sister Ellen?" I enquired.

"Yes," was his reply; "Mrs. Gordon is in town, is at his house, much out of health. She is very desirious to see you."

"I shall not wait, I assure you," I said, eagerly: "why not go this evening?"

James said he thought she would rather see you alone, as she is unwiling to see general company; and her best hours, that is when she is most herself, are in the afternoon."

"Is she very ill, then, Paul?" I asked, a vague terror seizing me. "What do you mean by saying 'most herself' tell me all you know."

"James thought that you ought to know before you saw her, that you might understand, and not be too greatly shocked by the change in her appearance. Mrs. Gordon is a victim to the terrible habit of opium eating; dying from its effects, he says, very rapidly. You will, I imagine, find her but a wreck of what she once was, of the woman you so loved and admired."

"Loved and admired." The words sounded to me like a death knell. Was this indeed a thing of the past? Was Ellen Gordon of my youth no longer anything but a beautiful memory? I could not believe it; I could not realize the meaning of my husband's words. They pierced my soul with anguish, though spoken tenderly, as knowing the bitterness to me of their import. I had read the "Confession of an Opium Eater," and had gleamed some parts of Coleridge's dark and sad history; had read how this fearful habit had wasted his frame, poisoned all the sources of enjoyment, dried up the fountains of natural affection, and fastened upon him a load of mental agony that became daily more intolerable; but I had never seen its effects, and therefore only faintly realized them. I found it impossible to think of Ellen Gordon as such a one as DeQuincey or Coleridge.

The hours passed wearily enough until the time arrived indicated by Mr. Mathews as the most suitable for my call. Ellen was expecting me.

How shall I describe my once lovely, cheerful friend? Seated in a large chair, rocking dreamily to and fro, with her head bowed, her hands moving restlessly upon her lap, and picking idly at her dress, she did not appear to notice my entrance until her daughter, touching her shoulder said: "Mamma, here is Mrs. Fenton." She raised her head a little then, took my offered hand, held it for an instant but with scarce a return of its pressure upon her own and motioned me to sit down beside her; requesting her daughter to leave us together in tones that sounded like the echo of her dead voice—that voice I remember as so clear and musical.

We sat in silence for some minutes. I could not speak—she either could not or would not. As we thus sat I noticed a change in her whole appearance. The face I remembered as full and oval was almost fleshless; the once bright eyes hollow and dull, wearing an inexpressible mournful expression; the clear skin had become olive-colored, and was drawn tightly over the sharpened features, on which dwelt a look of great mental anguish. The beautiful hair had lost its brightness, looking, not so much grey, as dead and lustreless. Her whole form was shrunken and bowed, and to the dignity and grace that formerly characterized it, had succeeded an appearance of utter helplessness, of cowering apprehension, as if some fearful danger threatened. I may not have noticed all this at once, but it was the impression carried away from that first visit.

At length she broke the silence, for my own lips were weakly closed, my tongue seemed chained.

"You find me altered, Sarah."

"Yes, my dear Ellen," I replied; "you have surely been very ill."

"Ill!" she said, and paused—then, "yes, if illness that may be called which is one lingering agony brought on and continued by one's own free will."

"Your own free will Ellen? That cannot be—surely it is beyond your control."

"They tell me it is not; they despise me because I cannot free myself from this bondage, and they will make you despise me."

"That is impossible, for I believe in you too thoroughly. If I could only help you."

"I am beyond help; even my physician tells me that—though they need not, I feel it too surely. But you will beleive in me no longer, Sarah, when you know all."

Then she poured out in one resistless tide of saddest eloquence, of which I can give but a faint shadowing the story of her struggles and her despair. It would consume too much space to write this conversation, or those that succeeded it, fully as I can recall them; therefore I shall endeavor to give in brief outline all the sad history related to me from time to time during these, my last interviews, with my dear afflicted friend.

In 183–, about ten years before the date of our renewed intercourse, she suffered fearfully from nervous disease, causing almost sleepless nights for a long period, a state of health brought on no doubt by extreme debility. Living in the country, several miles from any town, or from any medical practitioner, she struggled hard against the suffering and the increasing weakness it entailed, using such simple remedies as were recomended by friends, but without obtaing relief. At last her husband insisted upon calling in the aid of a physician, who immediately prescribed the use of opium in the form of morphia. This acted like magic, subduing the pain and giving her, even on the first night of its use, refreshing slumber, which she considered a boon to be thankful to God for, notwithstanding the succeeding nausea of the morning.

After a time the opium became indispensible. The agony of pain, the weary nights returned, and her physician ordered from time to time an increase of the dose, never warning her or her friends of the danger of continuing its use, or the importance of leaving it off as soon as practicable. When the physician ceased his visits the remedy was still at hand, and as the usual dose failed to quiet her nerves, she went on increasing it, until she, as well as her husband, became alarmed at the large quantity necessary to produce the desired effect. I never knew the amount of the dose reached, but supposed it to be very large. I do not believe—indeed I am very sure—it was never taken for any craving for excitement, nor from any love for the taste of the drug, which ever remained exceedingly distastful to her.

Her eyes were opened to her danger by what she thought a casual and inadvertant remark of a friend though, I think more probably dropped purposely in her presence, and she made an attempt to abandon its use. For awhile hopefully; for a gradual diminuition of the dose seemed to exert no unfavorable affect. But on its entire disuse, days of intolerable pain and sleepless nights of fearful agony ensued. Again the physician was sumoned, and by his advice she renewed the use of the poisonous drug, finding it necessary to take larger doses than before. He expressed surprise at the continued use, and at the large quantities taken.

Whose was the sin? If Dr. ——had not made the opium disease a study, being a regularly educated physician, he must have known the danger of a continued use of the drug, and his consequent duty to guard against it in all cases where he felt called upon to prescribe it. If it was his ignorance, was it not in his case sinful ignorance?

"I have tried," she said to me one day in despairing tones, when I spoke to her of the possibility of deliverance, "I have tried again and again, but the suffering has been too fearful. Dr.——told me that fearful consequenses would follow, that my nerves were so shattered, that I would probably die in the attempt; or what seemed more terrible still, would become insane. My appetite failed entirely, intense neuralgic pain seized me in every part. The slightest exertion of mind or body was impossible to me. I was sunk in the Slough of Despond. It was useless. I know, Sarah, you will think me weak; I despised myself, but I went back. Even my husband, though his face was like the image of despair when he said it, told me it was useless."

"Since then, Ellen?"

"Since then I have not tried, but have taken my dose morning and evening, though I loathe it, and loathe myself for taking it; but I cannot live without it, and I do not dare to die. I know that either way I must die ere long, for I feel that the poison is destroying me. My heart seems breaking with misery, and yet it will not break. I long for death to deliver me, and yet I fear it with an awful terror. The ease and quiet which the poison once gave me, no amount will procure for me now; I only take it to live. I cannot save myself: O, that I could warn others!"

* * * * * * *

Some three years previous to the time of which I write, her loving, patient husband died, taken from her suddenly under very trying circumstances. The opium had lost its power long before to excite or to quiet her nerves, but in no wise was she released from its bondage. She was compelled to take it to keep the very current of life, miserable as it was, from ceasing to flow.

The story of her husbands death was told without a tear; hers were dry eyes that could not weep, and she seemed to wonder calmly that mine should overflow, as they did occasionly at their recital, spite of all my efforts. His loving forbearance and patience was not succeeded in any wise by the son and daughter to whom he committed the care of their mother, the wife of their youth, still tenderly beloved, though so changed. They could not sympathize in what they considered blameable weakness, and treated their only surviving parent with little respect and tenderness—let us hope without intending to do so.

They had not the courage to refuse to supply her with the poison, fearing the consequences of sudden or even gradual discontinuance; nor the firmness to insist upon no augmentation of the dose, as their father had done for a long time. Yet they believed that "if mother would only exert herself to try to conquer the habit, she might get over it." This they made no scruple of saying to others, in and out of her presence, and though she heard it unmoved apparently, yet I do not doubt that it was "sharper than a serpent's tooth" to her heart, dulled as were its perceptions and its capabilities of feeling. It was to this she alluded in our first interview, and I was soon made sensible of her meaning by the cold, sneering remarks of her daughter, who treated her with a sort of contemptious patronage, that often stirred my wrath, though I deemed it wise to controll it.

Could she have forgotton all the love, all the teachings, all the blessings of my childhood, that she could thus requite so coldly, so patiently, that once tender, patient mother-love? And yet I can see that from their standpoint it must have been very difficult to her children to comprehend how one who on all other matters seemed perfectly sane, and whom they had always been accustomed to regard as possessing an unusual share of decision and mental power, should not be able to free herself from the chains of such a habit. They did not know how utterly it destroys the power of the will, the will may indeed prevent the forging of the chains, but it rarely has power to enable the enslaved victim to break them. But they are now where all is made plain, and if the children have seen and regretted their lack of duty, the mother has forgiven and still loves on.

I never saw my friend in a natural state of cheerfulness during all these days, though I was with her frequently. Once or twice there was an attempt at gayety, but it was only like the faint mocking of the gentle humor, the flashing, genial wit of former days. The same stony calm, the icy despair which met me on my first visit, was her habitual state. I parted from her with a sinking heart, anguish thrilled me from head to foot; to leave her thus seemed more than I could bear, for I knew it was our last parting on earth.

* * * * * * *

An impenetrable veil was drawn by her children over the last days of her life—happily they were but few after our parting. I could learn nothing save that "she remained much as when I saw her." I know not if she saw THE DELIVERER before her eyes closed upon early scenes, but I believe that He came at the last and broke her chains, leading her captivity captive, and restoring her to the liberty with which He makes His people free.

God forbid that I should [illegible] extenuate sin; but to the sinner let us be merciful, even as was our blessed Master while upon the earth, merciful as He is now: and has He not left us an example that we may walk in His steps?

I have said I had little hope to influence those in whom the habit was confirmed, but yet I do believe that even such may, if they have any power of the will left, emancipate themselves. Much and protracted suffering must doubtless be encountered; but, in the words of another, "it is a choice between two evils. If he abandons opium he must count upon much suffering of body, many sleepless nights, a disordered nervous system, and, at times, prostration of strength. If he continues the habit, there remains, as long as life lasts, the irresolute will, the bodily languor, the ever-present sense of hopeless, helpless ruin. The opium eater must take his choice between the two. On the one hand is hope, continually brightening the future; on the other is the inconceivable wretchedness of one from whom hope has forever fled."

"The medical profession are not agreed as to the treatment of this opium disease." Are they not supine and careless about the matter? How is it less dangerous than alcohol? And yet they, or many of them, fear to prescribe alcohol in cases where they see it to be the only remedy. But this insidious, serpent-like drug, is permitted too often by the medical attendants to wind its crushing folds around its victim, all unwarned of evil till writhing in its grasp, he awakes to find his efforts unavailing to deliver him from the cruel fangs which have entered into his soul.

"O, that I could warn others," was Ellen Gordon's oft-repeated cry—a cry that has come from many another captive, agonized heart. Will others heed the warning?

SKETCHES OF THE MOST REMARKABLE DEAD BEAT THE WORLD EVER KNEW.

This famous character, well known about the capitol and almost everywhere else, died in the charity Hospital, Washington, early last month, and was buried in Potters' Field. This sketch of him may be interesting:

His ancestry is found in a Virginia family, the members of which, it is stated, have of late years cut him off altogether. In early life he was what is termed a "gay boy," and in the chances of the turf he invested, unsuccessfully, an inheritance of nearly $40,000. Down as he was in pocket, though, his "turf" friends stood by him until he became, with natural talent and oily tongue, a recognized ward of the travling public. He never drank, but always "took a cigar;" and to his credit it must be said, that although he lived from hand to mouth at times in his patronage of bar room cheese and cracker boxes, he never ordered a meal or condiment which he did not promtly pay for. Many are the anecdotes related of his ingenuity in fooling railroad conductors, hotel keepers and others; and, in fact, some of his doings in that respect have become traditional American jokes; but so respectful was he in mien at all times that no one will utter other than a compassionate sentiment over his remains.

He had been ailing for about a week, and on Thursday became confined to his room on Maryland avenue southwest and on Saturday afternoon, being discovered in a dying condition, was removed by Sanitary Officer Burns to the Providence Hospital. He was paralyzed on one side the affection completely enveloping the brain. It was remarked that not a person had called to see him since his entrance into the hospital. He said to a friend a few weeks since that he was fifty-nine years of age, and although he was reposted rich in petty savings he never knew from day to day where his meals were to come from.

FRANCE HERSELF AGAIN.

The last installment of the French indemnity to the Germans was paid at Berlin on Friday last, and the evacuation of Verdun, the last fortress held by the German troops, was immediately commenced. The soil of France is now her own, if we except the territory ceded to Germany as a part of the indemnity. The promptness with which the French Government and people have paid the immense sum imposed upon them as a result of the war and this, too, when the country was reduced in its resources and struggling with intestine troubles, has awakened the world's admiration. It is true it was a matter of necessity, there was no other way to deliver the country from foreign occupation, but that such a vast sum should be paid in any circumstances, within so short a time seemed almost incredible, and the French people certainly deserve credit for their energy which they have displayed. The one man who merits more praise than any if not all others, is the head of the government, M. Thiers, who has been cast aside just as he has paid the indemnity and liberated France from the German army.

And now, what is to be the future of France? We can ask the question, but no one can give the answer. Whether it shall be republican, or kingly, or imperial remains to be seen, but there are strong indications that the claim of monarchy will again be acknowledged and some form of despotism established. The forced retirement of President Thiers was one step in this direction. On the 3d inst. he was called upon by the French residents Lucerene, Switzerland, where he has been staying, and in response to their greeting, addressed them at some length. He said he had devoted his life to the establishment of liberty in France. He had endeavored to establish it under monarchy, but had not succeeded, and he had come to the conclusion that the one excludes the other. He had become a republican, and was resolved to devote the remainder of his life to furthering the permanent establishment of a republican form of government in France. His counsels, however, do not seem to have great weight in France at the present time. The suppression of liberal newspapers and the free utterance of absolute principles by others, indicate that some one of the claimants to the throne of France, will ere long be ruling by his own supreme authority and for his own sake.

A FEW FACTS FOR CONSIDERATION

We have time and again, called attention to the mistaken policy of most of our North Carolina farmers. They adhere to the plan of raising crops for exportation and purchasing their needed supplies from abroad. This is not only wrong but it is ruinous. There is no country where hay can be raised more successfully, and yet there is scarce a single bale of Southern hay sold in our markets. There is no economy in such a system, for it is followed out, not with discrimination, but blindly, and not only hay, but pork, flour, clothing, boots, shoes, plows, harrows, and all the thousand things needed by our farmers are procured by the two staples—corn and cotton If these crops fail there is ruin. If they are in excess it is not much better. Only a medium crop, under this vicious system, pays its way and brings about an equality between income and expenditure, but it leaves no spare cash in the farmers pocket.

Is it not surprising, that, with these results, these things should continue in a country where all the crops and grasses and stock and the various other products for which the corn and cotton are exchanged, can be raised without difficulty? Hay, wheat, oats, peas, clover, sorghum, beef, mutton, pork, wool—all these can be successfully raised here, and the time is coming when they will be.

It has seemed strange to us that so few of our farmers have ever reflected over the fact that the freight on his produce and his purchases are all paid by him and come out of his pocket. It is nevertheless true, and we do not exaggerate when we say that their aggregate sum would suffice to furnish each farmer with a respectable amount of ready cash. We need a diversified agriculture and we need manufactories. The railroad will be the means of introducing both. Then this country will prosper.

The newspaper is not the creature of a moment. It outlives men and questions. What the speaker declares or asserts on the platform is soon forgotton, but what the editor writes is, by the clicking types placed in a more enduring form, to be remembered and read in years to come.

The celebrated author of the "Mill on the Floss" once said: It is precisely the most obstinate of men who are the most liable to shift their positions and contradict themselves. Everything is easier to them than to face the simple fact that they have been thoroughly defeated.

FAULT FINDERS.

Every community has its chronic fault finders. The world is full of them. "Nothing can please them." They seem to take delight in growling and grumbling over every thing they meet. If anything is good they complain because it is not better. Humanity has no bright side to these grumblers. It looks black, dreary, hopeless to them, from whatever point of view they examine it. They overlook the virtues of an individual, and hold up a single fault to judge his character from. They denounce a party as corrupt because a few rascals disgrace themselves by unworthy acts. The church is false because a few hypocrites find shelter within it. The world is on the high road to destruction, and everything indicates the depravity of man.

We do not envy the happiness of these grumblers. Their unhappy frame of mind is about the only pleasure they enjoy. It may sound paradoxical, but the social misery they create is to them a source of enjoyment. In our estimation a single hopeful heart is worth more than a regiment of these fault-finders. Humanity has its bright side—beautiful and attractive to those who seek it. The world is alive with public and private virtue, and we should be ready at all times to foster and encourage this element of social comfort and public happiness.

RAILROADS IN THE UNITED STATES.

From the standard work on railroads, "Poor's Railroad Manuel" we gather the following summary of statistics, detailed statements of 425 roads being given in that work. In the United States there are:

Miles of railway	57,323
Cost	$3,159,723,057
Cost per mile	55,116
Gross receipts	473,241,055
Operattng expenses	307,486,682
Net earntngs	165,754,373
Dividends paid	64,718,151

Total number of miles in operation 67,104, of which 6,424 were built last year. Some made no returns; others refuse information. The total earnings are $11,000,000 more than the receipts in the United States Treasury, and the net earnings $49,000,000 more than the Government interest account. The total cost is $900,000,000 more than the national debt. Thirty-three thousand nine hundred and thirty-four miles have been built since 1863.

Some of the politicians—those who call themselves Conservatives—are not learning much wisdom. They manifest too much of a disposition to go backward instead of marching forward. They surround their actions and discussions in the shadows of the past instead of the lights of the future. This is especially so in Virginia at this time. An important State canvas is going on there. To the surprize of the intelligent American public the Democrats, or whatever they call themselves, have raised the standard of a "white man's party," declaring by implication that the colord man has no rights which the white man is bound to respect. This is a mistake. The "Old Dominion" cannot afford thus to defer and retard the era of her prosperity and material development.

A recent writer, on speaking of the different tastes displayed in ornamenting the resting places of the dead, says:

One of the most beautiful burial places I ever saw was one where not a tombstone was to be seen, and where nothing indicated the last resting places of those who had passed away, but the gentle undulations of the turf, covered here and there with the fragrant and wandering thyme, whose blossoms in the summer furnish a perpetual banquet for the murmuring bee.

Genl. EDWIN S. MCCOOK was assassinated at a public meeting at Yanktown, Dakota Territory, on the 11th inst. by a banker of that place named P. P. WINTERMUTE. They had a quarrel a short time previous at which the General severely chastised his assailant. The letter went off and purchased a pistol and with it shot MCCOOK. The indignation of the people is great.

Narrow Gauge Railways.

COST OF CONSTRUCTION AND OF RUNNING.

Chief Engineer Osborne, of the Western Maryland Railway, recently made a report in relation to narrow gauge rail ways, from which we make an interesting summary:

THE COST OF CONSTRUCTION.

Under this head we have assumed that both roads are to be for double track built through a country of bold topographical features, where the engineer is put to the test to find a line that will afford him maximum gradients of 40 feet per mile, with a given minimum of radius for curvature, and where he may be compelled to adopt in an extreme case a grade of 80 feet per mile.

COST OF A MILE OF DOUBLE-TRACK ROAD.

4 ft. 8½ in Guage		3 Feet Guage
Land & Fencing	$2000	Land & Fencing	$1700
Clearing	600	Clearing	500
Gradation	28700	Gradation	19100
Masonry	6000	Masonry	4000
Stations	2000	Stations	2000
Contingencies	4100	Contingencies	2400
Engineering	3200	Engineering	2400
Double track 65 lb rail	22000	Double track 45 lb rail	15700
Switches	600	Switches	400
Total	$69200	Total	$48200

Difference $21,000 per mile.

The above estimates of the three-feet gauge road largely exceeds the proportion given by other engineers, some of whom have derived their figures from actual surveys, plans and profiles. It is therefore submitted as a safe comparison.

Such being the case, we find that by constructing a three-feet gauge road in place of the standard, there will be a saving on one hundred miles of double track road of $2,100,000. Now, let us suppose that $6,920,000 capital has been raised to build this 100 miles of road of the standard gauge. There would, in such case, be left in the treasurer's hands, after the completion of the three feet gauge, the above amount of $2,10,-000. Compound this sum at 7 per cent., and in 10½ years the 100 miles of new three-feet road would stand debtor on the company's books for only $620,000, or at a cost to its proprietors of $6,200 per mile.

OUTFIT OF THE RAILROAD.

We will first give the amount and cost rolling stock requisite on the four feet eight and one-half inch road for the assumed coal traffic transported against maximum grades of 40 feet per mile, by 20 locomotives, with trains of a gross weight of 444 tons, yielding a yearly tonnage of 848,640 tons. We will add 125,200 tons of a general goods per annum taken by one daily train each way, carrying each 200 tons of productive freight; and 166,500 through passengers conveyed in two trains daily each way, with 133 passengers in each train.

This traffic on the four feet eight and one-half inch road will require, without any allowance for extra engines or cars, for the

A Terrible Thunderbolt.

SUFFOLK, VA., Sept. 4, 1873.

Intelligence has just been received of a fearful calamity which occured in this county to-day. About 7 miles from town, on the Somerton road, reside the family of Mr. Charles Sumner. This morning Mr. S. left home for North Carolina, leaving his wife and children at home. The family, consisting of Mrs. Sumner, her little daughter, about five years old, and two sons, about seven or eight years of age, were about to go to the dinner table during the prevalence of a thunder storm. Just then a blinding flash of lighting filled the room, followed by a terrific peal of thunder. The west end of the house was shattered, and the family prostrated by the stroke. When help arrived, it was found that the two boys had been instantly killed, and the mother and daughter very badly burned. So severe are their injuries, that at this writing they are not expected to recover. It is said that the delicate health of Mrs. S. will render her recovery impossible.

From the top of Mount Washington on a clear day' Portland harbor, Maine, can be seen, though ninety miles distant.

At a recent sale in Utica of thorough-bred cattle 111 animals sold for the large sum of $380,000. A large number were bought by English stock dealers.

The State Educational Journal will appear in November. The State's best writers will contribute. It will be a forty eight page monthly, and will be devoted to education and literature.

At Baltimore on the 10 the Holliday Theater, St. Nicholas Hotel and a four story building, used as a high school were burned. Among the guests of the St. Nicholas were many actors who escaped with most of their wardrobe.

A Monument is to be erected at Montpelier, Vt., over the remains of Phillip Embury, the founder of the Methodist Church in America.

It is singular what a little thing will put a man out. A Jersey City lawyer was making a high flown speech the other day telling about angel's tears, weeping willows and silent tombstones, when his Honor said: "Confine your remarks to the dog fight case." The lawyer sat down.

A Clergyman writing to a friend says, "My voyage to Europe is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the pangs of the fiend Dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

Glass bonnets have appeared. They are formed of a tissue woven by fine glass threads, and may be said to be the glass of fashion fitted to the mould of form. Ladies who wear them must deny themselves the pleasure of criticising their neighbors on the principle that it is dangerous for those who live in glass houses to throw stones.

To the Public.

THE PAIN-KILLER manufactured by PERRY DAVIS & SON has won for itself a reputation unsurpassed in medical preperrations. The university of the demand for the Pain-Killer is a novel, interesting, and surpriiing feature in the history of this medicine. The Pain-Killer is now regularly sold in large and steadily increasing quantities, not only to general agents in every state and Territory of The Union, and every province in British America, but to Buenos Ayres, Brazile, Uragray, Perue, Chili, and other South American States, to the Sandwich Islands, to Cuba and other West India Islands; to England and Continental Europe; to Mozambique, Madagascar, Zanzibar, and other African lands; to Australia, and Calcutta, Rangoon and other places in India. It has also been sent to China, and we doubt if there is any foreign port or any inland City in Africa or Asia which is frequented by American and European missionaries, travelers, or traders into which the Pain-Killer has not been introdnced.

The extent of its usefulness is another great feature of this remarkable medicine. It is not only the best thing ever known, as every-body will confess, for bruises, cuts, burns, &c., but for dysentery or cholera, or any sort of bowel complaint, it is a remedy unsurpassed for efficeinncy and rapidity of action. In the great cities of British India and the West India Islands ace oiher hot climates, it has become the Standard medicine for all such complaints, as wall as dospepsia, liver complaint, and other kindoed disorders. For coughs and colds, canker, asthma and rheumatic difficulties, it has been proved by the most abundant and convinoing trials and testimony, to be an invaluable medicine. The proprietors are in possession of letters from persons of the highest character and respnnribility, testifying in unequivocal terms to the cures effected and the satisfactory results produced, in an endless variety of cases by the use of this great medicine. That the Pain Killer is deserving of all its proprsetors claim for it is amply proved by the unparalled popularity it has attaided. It is a sure and effective remedy. It is soid in almost every country in the world, and is becoming more and more popular every year. Its healing properties have been fully tested, all over the world add it need only to be known to be prized.

Iron in the Blood

PERUVIAN AN IRON TONIC SYRUP

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

We call attention to the following new advertisements:

Notice in Bankruptcy.
Assignee's Notices.
Court Notice.
Miss Martin's School.
Bunn's Syrup.

Local and Personal.

Miss MARTIN'S School will begin the 1st of October.

M. B. CULPEPPER, Esq., will accept our thanks for repeated favors.

Hon. J. W. ALBERTSON is holding Court in Northampton county this week.

A friend thus defines leisure: It is sweet to those who have earned it, but burdensome to those who get it for nothing. He says he speaks from actual experience.

We learn that Mr. NATHAN WINSLOW, of Perquimans county, died suddenly at Boston, Mass, on the 26. He was in his 79th year of age.

Our Post Master, W. A. PRICE, Esq., will accept our thanks for copies of the Post Office Gazette and The U. S. Office Bulletin. They contain a large amount of postal information.

Consistency is a jewel so rare that if its value were at all proportionate, an ounce of it would purchase a ton of diamonds. Scarce a week passes that we do not see repeated evidences confirming the truth of this.

Dr. L. K. SAUNDERS died at his residence in this city yesterday morning. He has been an invalid for many years. He had an extensive practice and many friends, all of whom will miss him. His age was 49 years.

We call special attention to the article "Narrow Gauge Railways" in this issue of the NORTH CAROLINIAN. We have a large amount of facts and statistics upon this subject which we propose publishing for the information of our readers.

In answer to repeated inquiries: "Will there be a Fair at this place this Fall?" we answer, yes. Let everybody get ready for it. The Executive Committee will announce the time and publish the Regulations, Premium Lists, etc., at an early day.

The weather is pleasant. Each boat is bringing back the summer wanderers—those who have been recruiting at the watering places—and our streets are once more resuming their wonted life and activity. The season of pleasure is ending and business of all kinds will be more lively.

Our friends in the different counties will confer a favor by fowarding to us by the first mail, every item of local news in their midst. Many things are occurring that would be read with interest if reported. We have made this request before. We repeat it now. Let us have them.

Our friend in Bertie who says his family cannot do without the NORTH CAROLINIAN" need have no apprehension of any such misfortune so long as he so promptly remits his subscription. He is among the kind of patrons publishers feel proud of. Long may he and his live to enjoy the reading of the paper of their choice.

We see by the last number of the New York Turf, Field and Farm that the members of the "Currituck Shooting and Fishing Club" are making arrangements for a "grand good time" this Winter.

A meeting of the Club was held on the 3rd inst. A large number of share holders were present, and considerable interest was manifested. Plans of the club house were submitted and adopted. The amount necessary to build the same was subscribed, and a sufficient overplus to completely furnish it was promised at the annual meeting, a portion being already taken. This is one of the most promising shooting clubs in existence, having among its members some of the best sportsmen in the country.

To day the NORTH CAROLINIAN is four and a half years old! It started under unfavorable auspices. Its editor was a stranger in a strange land, and his enterprize was looked upon by some with doubt, by others with suspicion, and by a few with any hope of success. The prospect did look gloomy we admit. But with faith in our power to win respect and confidence and with an earnest purpose to advocate those things we honestly believed calculated to promote the best interests of all, we entered the work and, have labored to the best of our ability—with what success, let the results answer. In appearance, in business, in prospects, in everything, behold the improvements and changes since then! And it is but the beginning. Ere the NORTH CAROLINIAN adds another four years to its existence we confidently expect to be called upon to chronicle more marvelous changes and improvements than have yet been made. Sometimes we are called a visionary. We have a hopeful spirit we confess; but remember that many things we advocated four, three, nay two years ago, some of which were pronounced utopian, have become established facts. They are but the beginning of what must and will follow. Mark the prediction! With its location, its surroundings, its public spirited citizens already here with the hundreds that will be induced to come when the Rail is built, as it will be, Elizabeth City is destined to become an important business and commercial centre.

Notwithstanding the recent rains, it is believed that if we have a faverable Fall, the Cotton crop in this locality will be fully an average one. Those who have been taking observations inform us that late Springs are invariably followed by late Falls. If the rule holds good this season all will yet be well.

The spirit of Progress has ever had resistance. In every age and in every country its advance has been one continual struggle. 'Tis so here. We have dreamers who dread being startled from their slumbers by the whistle of the Steam Horse. They have no desire for change—care nothing about seeing the country opened up to new enterprizes and avenues made to future greatness. The present is "good enough" for them. But they must yield. Their resistance stubborn as it is, will not avail. The selfish wishes of the few must be given up to serve and promote the interest of the many. There are vast resources in this section; the railroad must aid to develope them. There are wonderful energies among the people now latent and sleeping; the railway will awaken and arouse them all. There are possibilities here for wealth and prosperity unsurpassed anywhere on this green earth; the railroad will prove a potent agency in making them realities. This is our firm conviction, our earnest faith. It is founded on history, observation and experience. Hence we are willing to continue our efforts for this grandest enterprize ever agitated in this Albemarle region for we feel sure it will succeed and that its results will fully vindicate us in all we have said or written. The opposition of to-day will be of the past, and the unpleasantness engendered by controversy and discussion will be forgotten. All will be buried in the increasing activity of trade and the prosperity of our people.

LOCAL PORT-FOLIO

A thing of beauty—the new lamp in front of Dr. BUTT'S Drug Store. Foolish—spasms of profane rage The prime charm of life—domestic society. A good thing for a young doctor—plenty of pa-spelled either licence or tients. The brightest jewels in woman's nature—compassion and sympathy. A good rule—never count your chickens until they are hatched. Quite scarce—local news and greenbacks. Generally going to the dogs—bones. A Western settler—the sun at evening. Billiards gone to grass—a game of croquet.

LOCAL BRIEFS.—A new and neat verandah is being put up on the Albemarle House. Mr. KRAMER is doing the work—Our merchants are beginning to get ready for the Fall trade.—S. S. FOWLER Esq., and family have returned from an extended Northern visit.—Capt. C. G. MANNING, Collector of the port at Edenton, spent several days in this city last week.—The health of this locality has been and continues comparatively good.—The families are beginning to return from Nag's Head—We are glad to see our friend J. W. TURNER so far convalescent as to be at his place of business again.—The new Odd Fellow's Hall, third story of BRODIRICK & SMITH'S building on Water Street, will be one of the finest in the State.—Scuppernong grapes, large and fine, are plentiful in market.—On Saturday our business streets were more crowded than usual.—WHITCOMB expects to start their new mill to-day.—Mayor SHAW will probably arrive this evening.—Our erudite friend F. S. PROCTOR has returned from a month's sojourn at Nag's Head.—SALOMONSKYS are back in their old quarters again. Go and see how neatly and comfortably they look with their improvements.—Read the new advertisement in this issue.

Business Locals.

The Fall trade will soon open and Fowler on Water Sreet is ready for it.

We have a good word to say every week for LOWENBERG & JACOBS because they deserve it. They are reliable and fair dealing business men. Always give them a call when you go Norfolk. Their House is 22 & 24 Market Square.

We see that PROCTER & GAMBLE'S EXTRA OLIVE SOAP is becoming very popular in our city, its quality we know is superior, and being nicely perfumed we are not surprised that consumers prefer it and that it has a large sale.

Get The Best.

Not only did Mr. Howe invent the First Sewing Machine, but for twenty seven years of his life labored to render it more simple and effective, until it would seem that no candid observer, examining the simplicity of its construction, and perfectness of its work in all kinds of sewing, but must at one see and admit its general superiority to all others.

Not only is this true of its vital principles and its ingenious devices, but is also true in regard to the perfectness of its manufacture. This has been attested by the highest authority—the machine recieving the First Prize at the Paris Exposition in 1867, and Elias Howe, Jr., the Cross of the Legion of Honor as promoter of the manufacture of Sewimg Machines. F. L. KURTZ, Hertford & Elizabeth City.

The Newbern Times informs us that the bears are committing depredation of a very destrucive character upon the corn fields in the eastern part of Craven and Pamlico counties. Some of the farmers who have extensive fields of corn in the rich swamp land, and who expect a large yield, will not harvest enough for their own family use, so great is the destruction by these wild animals. One of these monsters was killed recently at Dawson's Creek, weighing over four hundred pounds, and in his stomach was found more than a peck of corn.

The Raleigh Sentinel has repeatedly charged that its contemporary of the same city, the News was bought by and is under the control of a rail road ring and that its purpose is to break down the Sentinel. These charges the News has denied as often as made, but the Sentinel seems never weary of returning to the subject. In editorial articles in Monday's issue it asserted that Dr Hawkins the President of the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad, recently gave the News $500 to prevent its "going up." This the News pronounces "a falsehood out of whole cloth." It then "goes for" Josiah Turner in the followering incisive style: The editor of the Sentinel seems to think by frequent repetition of a falsehood with out a scintilla of proof, he can make it answer the same purpose as truth. When he anserts that the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad or any other corporation, in or out of the State, has any interest in the Raleigh News, or has ever had, he lies, he lies deliberately, he lies willfully, he lies maliciously, he lies corruptly.

The Raleigh News, 7th inst., states that a young white girl named Lucy Powell, seventeen years old, who has been living for some time at the residenec of Captain J. P. Adams, in that city, was, on the 3d inst., called on by a negro woman who urged her to go to Selma Johnston county, to live with a rich man who would make her a fine lady, &c. Miss Powell indignantly ordered the negress off, when the woman declared she was her mother, and claimed her rights as such. She then went of, threatening she would yet have her daughter. A short time afterwards a negro policeman came to the house, and arrested Miss Powell, whom he conducted to a notorious house of ill repute kept by one Jennie Davis! There the poor girl was kept until her friends obtained her release by order of the Mayor—but not until she had been in the vile den for several hours. Notwithstanding the fact that the young girl and her friends demanded an investigation, the Mayor ordered none. It is no wonder, then, that the News demands that this outrage should be fully investigated, and the guilty parties punished. The young girl Powell came to the State from Ohio in 1861, and has resided in North Carolina ever since.

UNDEVELOPED VIGOR.

The feeble and debilitated usually fancy they are in a more hopeless condition than they really are. The resources of nature are not easily exhausted. Even when strength and appetite fail, when the eyes are heavy and lustreless, the complexion pallid, the nerves tremulous, the body attenuated, and the mind depressed, there is generally a reserve of latent power behind such palpable evidences of weakness. Various modes of treatment are resorted to by physicians in the hope of developing and rendering available this store of sleeping vitality, but the surest, and indeed the only thoroughly safe and reliable means of awakening the dormant energies of the system is a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Electricity, shower baths, the flesh brush, sea bathin, &c., may be well enough in their way, as auxiliaries, but they do not reach the source of the evil. All physical debility proceeds either from a derangement of the functions of the assimilating, secretive and vital organs, or from a sluggish constitution. In either case, and also in cases where both causes exist, the Bitters will invariably produce an immediate and salutary changed in the condition of the patient, and evectually effect a complete cure. None of the dangerous alkaloids, too often administered as tonics, can be otherwise than deleterious under such circumstances, and to give mercury is positively criminal. The direct effect of the great vegetable specific will be manifested in an improved appetite, a more cheerful frame of mind, a gradual returnj of strength, an increase of flesh and a healther complection. Meanwhile, however, the constitu inert and feeble, will have been roused and renovated by the subtile elements of invigoration contained in Bitters.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite, gives a smooth and glossy skin—transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

RURAL AFFAIRS

Get the Best.

Plants vary immensely in their manufacturing and productive powers; some have a tendency to run to leaf, straw, top, grain or root; look for instance at the difference in the percentage of top to bulb in mangolias, carrots, swedes, sugar-beet, onions, &c. Note also the immense difference in the ratio of straw to grain, in the different varieties of wheat, barley, oats, even the difference in the growth of grasses, &c., is very great, and the loss of force, by the growth of inferior varieties of plants is enormous. They take as much space, require the same culture and care, and involve the same expense in harvesting, &c., as the best; yet what poor miserable sinners you feel, when you carry the inferior samples to market. In regard to all plants, the best whatever the seed may cost, is the cheapest. Neither have we by any means reached the limit of improvement. We want still longer and plumper ears in our grain crops; less top and more and better bottom in our roots. At the present time, one of the greatest of boons could be offered to sugar growers is a sugar beet with as small a top as the best short-topped mangolds. The proportion of top to bottom in sugar beet is still unprofitably large. Neither have we yet reached the maximum of grain with a minimum of straw in grain crops everything that can be had, and thus check much loss, while waiting hopefully for better and still better, and more productive varieties in the future. The same rule holds good with animals; bullocks; sheep, pigs and fowls which convert the magic touch of life, grain, cake, hay, straw, roots, corn, chaff, grubs, worms, and even "old-daddy-long-legs." into the most nourishing food. There is no such manufactory in the world so well filled with skilful workers as is found in the living economy of the beasts of the farm. Each of them is making beef, mutton, pork, butter, cheese, eggs, and fowls of most unlikely materials, and each also is gifted with its own distinctive force and skill as a worker. Hence the importance of employing only the most skilful; that is the fastest; the surest, the best workers in each class. You want to grow beef; then, there is the Shorthorn ready to your hand, a beef-grower from calf-hood. You want rich milk for your coffee and strawberries & cream; then there is the Alderdey cow fills the pail—small it may be, with milk rich as ready made cream, and so of other breeds. Determine what you want—beef, mutton, cheese, milk, eggs, or fat fowl, and choose your stock accordingly. But reverse this order; try for instance to lay on beef on an Alderney at a profit and see how you will lose force, time, and money. It is so in degree with all other animals. Pure blood pays what it cost many times over, and the best of each animal as of every plant, is, in the end, the most profitable, and therefore the cheapest.—Mark Lane Express.

The Keep of a Cow.

We asked two experienced Wisconsin dairyman "How many cows will a good dairy farm of 160 acres support in a average season keeping beside only the horses needed, and perhaps, a few hogs to use up the whey &c.?" One, who has been many years in the business—as this was in private conversation we do not mention names—said that on his farm of that size, on which were 20 acres thickly covered with timber, and worthless for pasture, he could keep 40. The other's estimate was 40 also, for the 160 acres. Of course both included the use of such as was nesessary for the usual orchard garden, &c., but not for the production of anything for sale except the products of the cow in milk, cheese, or butter. Both of the dairymen to whom we refer believe heartily in the value of sowed corn believing it a cheaper feed than hay. One says that he would want 1½ acres of pasture for each cow, to last until after haying. After that time he pastures the meadow, and seeds green corn-fodder, &c., with the usual pasturage for each cow for the whole season, also feeding corn-fodder in the fall. He so plants this that while it produces a large amount of stalks and leaves, it also matures a considerable quantity of corn. On this he relies largly for the winter.—Western Farmer.

Some Rational Rules.

The following are intended for the use of poultry breeders:

1. Feed regular.
2. Perches two feet from ground.
3. Nests on ground.
4. White wash your poultry house inside.
5. Paint your poultry house outside, if you want the boards non-splitting.
6. Feed plenty of green food.
7. Never over feed.
8. Fresh water daily.
9. Have a dust bath in your fowl house.
10. Never train your cocks to fight.
11. Give stimulating food when moulding.
12. Make cleanliness a speciality in your fowl house.
13. Clean out fowl house once per week.
14. Breed to the standard
15. Given plenty of ventilation, beside warmth, and have your house water proof. These are true and simple guides for the poultry fraternity [M. K. Boyce. jr., Berks Co., Penn.

A Horse with Cough.

A. G.: When a horse coughs as soon as he commences to eat his hay or grain, it may be taken to be a case of inflamation of the bronchial tubes, which, if not corrected, will soon result in difficulty of breathing, known as heaves. Feeding dusty or moldy hay has frequently caused bronchitis, or a chronic cough which has ended in a case of heaves impossible of cure, and only relieved by a total change of feeding. We would in this case recomend mashes of carrots or bran, with a dose of one dram of iodide of iron with two drams each of powdered gentian and aniseed, given morning and night, for a few days. As soon as the swelling of the glands is reduced and the cough lessened feed regularly cut hay wetted and sprinkled with meal. Two drams of copperas (sulphate of iron), with the same quanity of ground gentian root, should be given daily until the cough altogether subsides.

See how much you can lighten yonr harness during hot weather. The back-strap and breeching can often be removed without trouble from double teams or carriages. A breast-plate is cooler than a collar, and will answer well for pleasure carriages.

When you are perspiring freely after a little ususal exertion, or are suffering with heat when exposed to the sun, think of your horse under the same circumstances, use him as moderately as you can, relieve him as soon as yon can.

Among the speakers at an immense farmers meeting held in Washington, Iowa lately was Miss Julia A. Garetson, a farmer's "daughter," as the telegraph briefly describes her whose oration was pronounced the best of the lot. Her speech was mainly denunciatory of the monopolies and of political corruption generally; and abounded in eloquent exortaion and lever chits.

BANKRUPTCY.

THE FIFTY PER CENT. CLAUSE.

As there seems to be a misunderstanding in regard to the effect of the provision of the Bankrupt Act, commonly called the 50 per cent clause, we publish the following extracts from the Act:

The second clause of the thirty-third section as amended by the Act of July 27, 1868, provides "that no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to fifty per centum of the claims proved against his estate upon which he shall be liable as the principal debtor unless the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors to whom he shall have become liable as principal debtor and who shall have proved their claims, filed in the case at or be fore the time of hearing the application for discharge.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled—that the provisions of the second clause of the thirty-third section of said act as amended by the first section of an act in amendment thereof, approved July 27th, 1868, shall not apply to those debts from which tha bankrupt seeks a discharge which were contracted prior to January 1st, 1869.

The true meaning is not that a bankrupt must be able to pay fifty per cent of all his debts, before he can obtain a discharge, as many believe; but that his estate, in the hands of his assignee, at the time of the discharge, must be equal, to fifty per cent, of the amount of the debts.

1. That he owes as principal;
2. That have been proved against his estate in bankruptcy; and
3. That he has contracted since the 31st day of December, 1868.

Or, if a majority in number and value of those who have proved their debts, to whom the bankrupt is indebted as principal, on debts contracted subsequent to Dec., 31, 1868, consent in writing to the discharge—such bankrupt may be discharged forever from all his debts.

If a debtor, owing three thousand dollars as principal, twenty-five hundred of which indebtedness was contracted prior to January 1, 1869, and five hundred subsequent to that time, files his petition in bankruptcy, and all his creditors prove against him, and there are no assets in the hands of the assignee, the petitioner will be entitled to a discharge; but it will be a bar only to the debts contracted prior to January 1, 1869.—If no creditors prove, the discharge will be good against all debts, whether contracted before or after January 1, 1869.

The practical effect in bankruptcy cases generally is, that creditors fail to prove their debts, finding it ordinarily unprofitable. They have had, in a large majority of instances, heretofore the trouble and expense of making proofs, without receiving any return. The 50 per cent. bugbear, therefore when viewed in the light of the law and common-sense, disappears.

EXEMPTIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

The exemptions under the 14th section of the Bankrupt Act are as follows.

1. Household and Kitchen furniture to an amount not exceeding $500,00
2. Wearing apparel of Bankrupt and family.
3. Uniform, &c., if he has been a soldier in the United States Army.
4. Personal property of the value of $500, to be selected by the Bankrupt.
5. A Homestead and the dwelling and buildings used therewith, not exceeding in value the sum of $1000,.00; or in lieu thereof, any lot in any city, town or village not exceeding in value the sum of $1000,000.
6. The reversionary interest in the Homestead lands.

"In laying off the Exemptions in some Districts, the Assignees are ordered to accept and abide by, any assignment of a homestead which has been made by a Sheriff under the State laws; or which has been assigned upon the application of a debtor in accordance with the laws of North Carolina. Where no such assignment of homestead has been made, the assignee will proceed, to set apart such homestead, and make the other exemptions according to the rules of the bankrupt Court.

The report of such exemptions when made by the assignee can be excepted to by the bankrupt or by any creditor, within twenty days after the allotment of such exempt property.

EFFECT OF THE DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY UPON JUDGMENT.

It is the opinion of many of our best lawyers that the discharge in bankruptcy, discharges judgment debts existing against the bankrupt at the time of filing his petition, and that therefore the liens existing by virtue of such judgments, upon homesteads are wiped out, and cannot afterwards be enforced. In fine, that the practical effect of the discharge, is to leave a man, whose homestead was encumbered by judgments, free from all his debts, of every nature, and the owner in fee simple of such homestead.

Again many lawyers, equally prominent in the profession, are of opinion that such will not be the effect of the discharge. That the homestead, will still be liable under the judgments and that when it determines under our State laws, the judgment creditor may enforce his lien and collect his debts.

To place this matter beyound doubt, the following rule has been adopted for the benefit of petitioners who are not willing to run any risk.

That the petitioning debtor may file his petition in the District Court, addressed to Hon. Geo. W. Brooks, asking that the judgment creditor, or creditors, show cause why the liens existing in pursuance of their judgments should not be adjusted by said court, and their present value ascertain and fixed, and the amount when so ascertained, to be made the true value of such lien or liens by the decree or judgment of said District Court, in bankruptcy.

The right to adjust such liens, is exercised in pursuance of Sec. 1. of the Bankrupt Act.

FILING PETITIONS AND SCHEDULES.

Petitions and Schedules must be in duplicate. Petitioner should sign each sheet, except oath to schedules. It is not necessary to file sheets of schedules that are not used. All papers in bankruptcy must be sworn to before a Register in Bankruptcy, U. S. Commissioner, or Clerk of the court.

The following deposit to secure costs is required at time of filing Petition. Register [illegible] Clerk $20, Messenger $5. Bankruptcy blanks can be had of M. B. Culpepper, Elizabeth City, prepared in sets for Two Dollars per set.

The original papers in all such cases should be sent to T. W. Costen, Register, Elizabeth City, N. C.
